Happen in the shoe shops these days and you'll see everybody you know buying shoes for the summer. I suppose the going-away is largely responsible, but it really looked like an opidemic to me last week, when matrons, girls and children fairly swarmed round their favorite salesmen and demand-ed all sorts of dainty things in shoe leather for the summer campaign. for the summer campaign.

St. Louis is essentially different from every other city in the Union, I believe, when it comes to the purchase of women's things. Nearly every woman has her own especial cierk, and she positively will not be served by any one else. This is particularly true in the matter of footgrar. I spied two young women seared in a well-known about oung women seated in a well-known shop, th with books in their hands calmly reading until the clerk who always fitted them came back from his luncheon. There were others, but nobody but Mr. Blank knew their sizes and their preferences. So they waited, and good-humoredly, too. In any other town but this those girls would have taken the first salesman that came along and hurried off.

You may deduce any ergument that you like from the above illustration. Whether it speaks for our friendliness, our sense of Southern leisure, our conservatism, our pro

But shoes-they are of new and delightful styles, calculated to disturb even the best balanced feminine mind this season. First let me disabuse your mind of the idea that you can buy a tan shoe, provided you have seen somewhere that the tan shoe is, parexcellence, the thing. You can't get them. They are not for sale. The girl who proudly trips about this next month at the gardens with Russia leathers on her feet either ordered them especially made for her by some Eastern manufacturer or else had them sent as a gift from some whos dealer-wholesale in New England. Next summer, to they tell me, the tan shoes for men and women will be here for general wear, but this summer only the exclusives will be able o display them.

The styles are delightful and never pret-tier. Oxfords, of course, are the staples for general street wear. The Colonial—she of the big buckles and ungainly tongue—are passe, terribly so. Chicago is wearing them. but that doesn't prove I'm fibbing, does it? The Du Barry style is new and pretty; but, oh, so trying. Unless your feet are your strongest point, unless you've an insiep so high that you can refer to it as an inherit-ance, don't, I beg of you, venture on the Du Barry. Dozens of girls in town have tried, and almost wept and wailed because the stylish shoe would not go on, and when it would, looked bad.

Mrs. Duthell Cabanne is, so, far the only woman whom I have known to wear the shoe with any sort of grace, and she can wear goloshes and look like a fairy even

What are the earmarks, or footmarks, rather, of this shoe now made famous by Mrs. Carter and her play?

Well, this exford has, first of all, a seam right straight up the middle of the foot, over which the sides meet, and these are held together with a broad ribbon tied in a bow. The heels are usually Louis, some-times Cuban, according to taste. Dull kid-they call it "mat" kid-is the favored leather, with patent vamps or not, as one pre-fers. But the middle seam is the most vex-atious thing. A long elim foot looks atroclous in it, and if you wear anything over don't even give the Du Barry a second nec. Small and very pretty feet, with a high, arched instep, may venture, but absolutely nothing else. Mrs. Bert Ball had on a pair the other day as we passed on the Cabanne crossing, but, like Mrs. Cabanne,

Mrs. Daniel Alexander G'Gorman, who was Mildred Bell, took several very smart pairs of summer shoes East with her. They will see European wear, however, before they reach Broadway. And as everybody says shoes for women bought on the other side are terrible in fit and make, she is wisely provident. One of her pairs is the buttoned oxford, with a low French heel and a dull kid. This buttoned sort is quite exclusive and very smart. The soles are slightly extended, if one intends them for street wear. Mrs. Sylvester Judge, whose footgear is always a subject of envy among her feminine friends, is wearing these buther feminine friends, is wearing these but-toned oxfords, with pretty patent leather vamps, Miss Mabel Jones is another devotee of the same shoe. Four small buttons usually close the shoe. What is known as the "court tie" is very popular in St. Louis. Nearly everybody one meets is wearing this sort, which is higher on the instep than last year's oxford, also higher in the back. The soft dull kid is the preferred variety, and, of course, the broad-est silk ties that one can buy. After buying, I may add, comes a terrific struggle to get the wide silk through the eyelet holes. Miss Byrd Jourdan, Miss Bushman, Miss Julia Cabanne, Mrs. Otho Ball are a few who de this particular style their own for the summer.

Silppers have their innings this season, too. And beaded effects, so Mr. Laughlin tells me, are being sought by well-dressed women. The low-cut slipper, with three straps, is perhaps a greater favorite than any other. Mrs. Bleir wears this sort conthually for dress occasions, hers always made of patent leather. A high boot for street purposes and a dainty patent slipper for the house and all occasions when onioes not wear a short skirt, is Mrs. Blair's

Mrs. A. C. Cassidy wears pretty slippers always. This summer she has purchased largely of the soft dull-finished kid, and has adopted the same material for her oxfords. She will take East with her next month fo in Russia, the only pair that I've known in town, besides innumerable slippers of the strapped kind, made of different dressy kinds of leather, and some of them beautifully embroidered in beads. Mrs. John Ockerson, who has a charming little foot, is wearing the Meredith oxford, which has a Very graceful cut, not so pronounced as the Du Barry, with a ribbon bow on the instep. Let me tell you, en passant, a startling bit of news: Pumps are to be the rage next seeson for dancing. A low-cut patent-leather pump, with the identical dinky little bow tie on top like the men's, and a wooden Cuban heel.

There is much lamentation in art circles over some intelligence which Mr. Charles Ward Rhodes has just conveyed to his friends—namely, that he expects to take a permanent departure from St. Louis next month, and will hereafter make his home in Boston. Not even next year, and its Fair delights seem able to prolong his stay. to the great regret of both St. Louis artist and music sets. Mr. Rhodes has been so long identified with the museum and its workings that it is hardly possible to conceive of this institution without him. Christ Church Cathedral choir, where he has filled an important position; the Choral-Symphony chorus, where he has sung for many seasons; the Union Musical Club, with which he associated himself at an early date of its existence, to say nothing of the social life of town in which he has been a genial and quite indispensable factor, are all genuinely regretful.

He will enter the business world rather more actively in Boston, and in association with a large importer's firm, expects to spend considerance time visiting European markets each year, as well as becoming a part of the artist life of the Eastern city, where he already has a large acquaintance Mr. Rhodes will leave town July 12 going to visit his mother, Mrs. Rhodes, at the family home in Marietta, O., for two months.
